LICENCES TO USE MUSIC

If you are playing music in your dance classes, copying music or sound recordings to give to your students or recording performances of your dance school events, you'll need music licences.

Dance schools who use recorded music in their classes will need to get licences from both APRA AMCOS and Phonographic Performance Company of Australia (PPCA).

APRA AMCOS have three licences to cover the various activities of dance schools.

- * Public Performance of Music licence: for playing music at your dance school as part of dance classes.
- * Reproduction of Music licence: for copying music and sound recordings to give to your pupils. This AMCOS-ARIA licence covers 1. Audio recordings; and 2. Video recordings of dance school concert events (max 75 videos each year).
- *End of Year (or similar such as AASCF competitions) Concerts licence: Playing music outside the dance class at end-of-year or similar concerts.

Phonographic Performance Company of Australia (PPCA) licences allow you to publicly perform/play commercial sound recordings: i.e. to play a CD in a dance class. The PPCA licence is separate to, and distinct from, an APRA licence. If you publicly perform a sound recording, you will need to apply for a licence from both PPCA and APRA AMCOS.
